2022-23 Additional Promotion Material Requirements for the College of Natural Sciences

Expert Teaching Evaluations

The University requires a minimum of three evaluations of faculty's teaching during their time in current rank. CNS requires that at least one of these evaluations is conducted by the expert teaching evaluator through the Texas Institute for Discovery Education in Science (TIDES); the remaining evaluations can be done by faculty peers.

The Candidate's Reflection on Observing a Peer's Class

The goal of this requirement is for faculty themselves to have the opportunity to observe instructional approaches of their colleagues and reflect in writing on how those observations might inform their own teaching. CNS requires a minimum of two reflections during faculty's current time in rank.

Ranking of Journals

- Source - Faculty candidates are expected to use one of the following sources:
 - Web of Science
 - A database well-recognized in the specific scientific discipline
- Include a list journals in which the candidate has published and for each journal list impact factors

How to Pull Report:

- On Web of Science homepage, click on "Products" in the top right corner and the select "Journal Citation Report"
- Select the icon for "Browse Journals"
- Click on the black box that says "Filter," then click "Journals" and type in the name of the journal that has published your article. Click on the journal's name when it appears. This will add the journal name as a green icon below the search bar.
- Continue adding all the journals that have published your works. When you are finished, click the green "Apply" button to generate the report.
- Click on "Export" in the top right and export the report as a CSV file.
- Save final report as a PDF.

Citation Analysis

- Source - Faculty candidates are expected to use at least one of the following sources:
 - Google Scholar
 - Web of Science
 - A database well-recognized in the specific scientific discipline

Candidate's Statement on Their Contributions to Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion

Candidates should provide a statement describing their contributions to inclusion and diversity. This may include past and current contributions to increase diversity of the faculty, staff, student body or scientific discipline such as, for example, techniques adopted to create an inclusive classroom, efforts to broaden participation in faculty member's research program, and/or efforts to recognize and address the potentially disparate ways that the faculty member's research impact diverse communities or populations. Candidates can reflect on their future plans too.

Budget Council Statement on Candidate's Contributions to Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion

Budget Councils should review the candidate's statement on their contributions to diversity, equity, and inclusion and highlight the candidates past, present, and future actions on implementing inclusion and diversity, and put these contributions in the context of the department or area of focus. For instance, how has the candidate's incorporation of inclusion and diversity into their research or teaching impacted the department / university / discipline? How do the candidate's efforts support the diversity and inclusion goals of the department / university / discipline?
